Carmel Valley Outlook

VOL. X, NO. 42 | 20 Pages | CARMEL VALLEY, CALIF. | 15c | October 21, 1971

FLECKS OF GOLD and splashes of rusty brown mark the changing season along the Carmel River. Although Nature wields her autumnal paintbrush more subtly here than in colder climes, the face of fall is unmistakable among the cottonwoods, sycamores and willows along the river banks. For more studies of the many moods of October in Carmel Valley, see pages 10 and 11.

THE TOWN CRIER

The County Board of Supervisors will get a run-down on the Federal Flood Plain Insurance Program from representatives of the State Department of Water Resources nexty Tuesday at 10:30 a.m.

The supervisors have received requests from several individuals and groups in Carmel Valley, including the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Carmel Area Coalition, asking that they apply flood plain zoning to the Carmel River. This must be done before individual property owners can apply for federal flood insurance.

Members of three Carmel Valley churches will join for an ecumenical service Oct. 31 to crown the Madonna in Carmel Valley Village by the White Oak Inn.

Participating in the 1 p.m. ceremony will be choral groups from Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Catholic Church, St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, and the Carmel Valley Community Chapel.

The lovely statue is the work of the Monterey sculptor Djey Owens. A crucifex blessed by the late Pope Pius XII is sealed into the heart of the statue.

A similar ecumenical service blessing the statue was held in 1964.

Board turns down appeal on Carmel Knolls rezoning

The Board of Supervisors decided Tuesday to cancel a Nov. 3 hearing on a controversial 1.2 acre development at the foot of Carmel Knolls Drive on the grounds the matter has already had sufficient consideration.

The hearing had been set at the request of Mrs. Loretta Mauber, a Carmel Knolls property owner, who contends that the triangular parcel was illegally rezoned ST (special treatment) in 1967. She is opposed to the use permit recently approved by the Planning Commission and upheld by the supervisors which will permit construction of six homes on the property.

Despite Tuesday's setback, Mrs. Mauber said yesterday she intends to file a new appeal with the supervisors, asking them to set aside the 1967 rezoning on the grounds that the parcel is less than five acres, which is the size generally referred to in the ST ordinance.

Deputy County Counsel Roy Anderson told the Outlook this morning that in his opinion "It is quite proper to classify a parcel ST regardless of its size, but the size does later determine what can be done with it."

Mrs. Mauber has also written the Grand Jury to ask for an investigation of records missing from the Planning Department on the property. Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon has acknowledged that some records are lost or missing, but has told the supervisors that all essential documents have been duplicated and are on file.

New tough rules on septic tanks adopted

More stringent regulations covering the use of septic tanks in Monterey County was adopted by unanimous vote of the Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

The revised ordinance eliminates loopholes and vagueness in the previous code, and incorporates provisions dealing with garbage and trash disposal.

Among its highlights are the following:

1. All new homes or buildings must connect to a sewer line if it runs within 200 feet of the property line. This does not apply to existing buildings which have a properly functioning septic tank.

The only exceptions to the mandatory sewer hook-up is for ranches of over 10 acres, if the owner of the sewer refuses permission to connect or if the property owner can't obtain an easement to connect, or if topographical conditions make connection impossible.

2. Persons applying for a septic tank permit must submit a plot plan and application to the County Health Director. The applicant may be required to pay for percolation and soil tests. Any materials used must meet the approval of the Health Director.

3. Any permit issued shall become null and void if the sewage disposal system is not installed and completed within one year of the date the permit is issued.

4. No permits will be issued before the applicant has obtained a use permit for the particular use involved.

5. No septic tank may be put within 50 feet of the edge of an embankment.

6. No drain field may be closer than 50 feet to any waterway, and no seepage pit closer than 100 feet. The minimum size of a drainage field is 1000 square feet of absorption area.

7. No waste matter of any kind which is dangerous to health or sanitation may overflow the land or empty, drain, flow or seep into any river, stream, creek, spring, lake, pond or any other waterway.

8. Except on construction sites or for farm workers, flush toilets connected to a septic tank or sewer are required. Privies may be used on property 10 acres or larger. (Previously, a privy was legal on property over 2½ acres.)

9. No person shall accumulate or allow to accumulate on the surface of the ground any garbage, rubbish, trash, debris, cans, dead animals or other offensive waste matter unless a use permit has been obtained for this purpose.

The ordinance also authorizes the Director of Health or his deputies to enter any premises for inspection purposes, if they first show proper credentials and attempt to locate the owner or person in charge. If refused admission, they may obtain a court order to carry out the inspection.

Persons unhappy with a ruling of the Health Director have 10 days in which to appeal that decision to the Board of Supervisors.

All outdoor burning to be banned in 1974

All outdoor burning except for agricultural purposes will be banned in Monterey and Santa Cruz counties as of July 1, 1974.

The ruling, aimed at curbing air pollution, was passed by a 7-2 vote of the Monterey-Santa Cruz County Unified Air Pollution Control District after a public hearing in Salinas on Monday.

The only outdoor burning not affected will be barbecue fires for cooking food.

As originally drawn up, the ban would have become effective on Jan. 1, 1973. At the suggestion of Edward Munson, district director, this was extended another 18 months to allow areas that have inadequate trash collection and dump services to improve these services.

The board also agreed to give further consideration to the possibility of establishing burn zones and burn days for persons unable to obtain collection service. Agricultural burn days are now established by the State after an early-morning evaluation of atmospheric conditions.

Valley youths burned in school lab mishap

Two Carmel Valley boys suffered serious burns in an accident in a science laboratory at Carmel Middle School Wednesday afternoon.

The youths are Robert Drye, 13, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Drye of Brookdale Drive, and Jacques Wilson, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques H. Wilson of 51 Rancho Road. Both are in the eighth grade.

According to Middle School principal, Orville Rogers, the boys, serving as student assistants in the science lab, were filling alcohol lamps when the fluid ignited and caught their clothes on fire.

Two science teachers working nearby, Clell Seelig and Roland Schut, extinguished the flames within moments with blankets and a fire extinguisher.

Both boys were taken by ambulance to Community Hospital, where Drye is reported in satsifactory condition this morning with first and second degree burns covering 25 percent of his body.

After emergency treatment at Community Hospital, Wilson was transferred to Fort Ord Hospital. This morning his condition was listed as serious, and plans were underway to transfer him to the burn center at Brook Army Hospital in San Antonio, Texas.

Rogers said it is not yet known what cuased the fluid to ignite. He said both boys had been carefully selected as assistants, and had performed the task of filling the lamps several times.

Immediately after the accident, which occurred at approximately 2:05 p.m., Rogers pulled the fire alarm and all classes were evacuated. There was no general fire in the science lab and property damage was estimated at $25 to a nearby battery charger and one wall, which was scorched.

EMERGENCY CALLS

The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department responded to the following calls for medical assistance last week:

Friday at 10:45 a.m., Merriel Hupp of Esquiline Road was taken to Community Hospital because of breathing difficulties. At 7:10 p.m. Michael Downey of Country Club Drive was taken from Los Laureles Lodge to Community Hospital as a medical emergency.

At 8 p.m. Friday, the ambulance reported to the scene of an automobile accident on Carmel Valley Road west of the Laureles Grade. Two persons involved in the accident, Hiram Bishop of La Ventana and G. Burdette Smith of 473 West Carmel Valley Road declined treatment.

Benita Conlan of Paso Hondo Road was given inhalation at 3:05 a.m. Saturday and released in the care of her doctor.

Saturday afternoon Corey Willingham, 13, of 12 Ford Road was treated at the fire station for a possible sprained left wrist suffered when he fell off a bicycle.

Finally, at 6:31 p.m. Saturday, Murray Draper of Rancho Road was treated for a fractured left arm after a motorcycle accident on Middle Canyon Road and released to a local doctor.

Bert Rudolph elected chairman of aviation advisory unit

Bertram F. Rudolph jr. of Carmel was elected chairman of the Monterey Bay Area Aviation Advisory Board (MBAAAB) at the organization's monthly breakfast meeting last week in Monterey.

The new chairman has been with MBAAAB since 1963 and has served as vice chairman for the past two years.

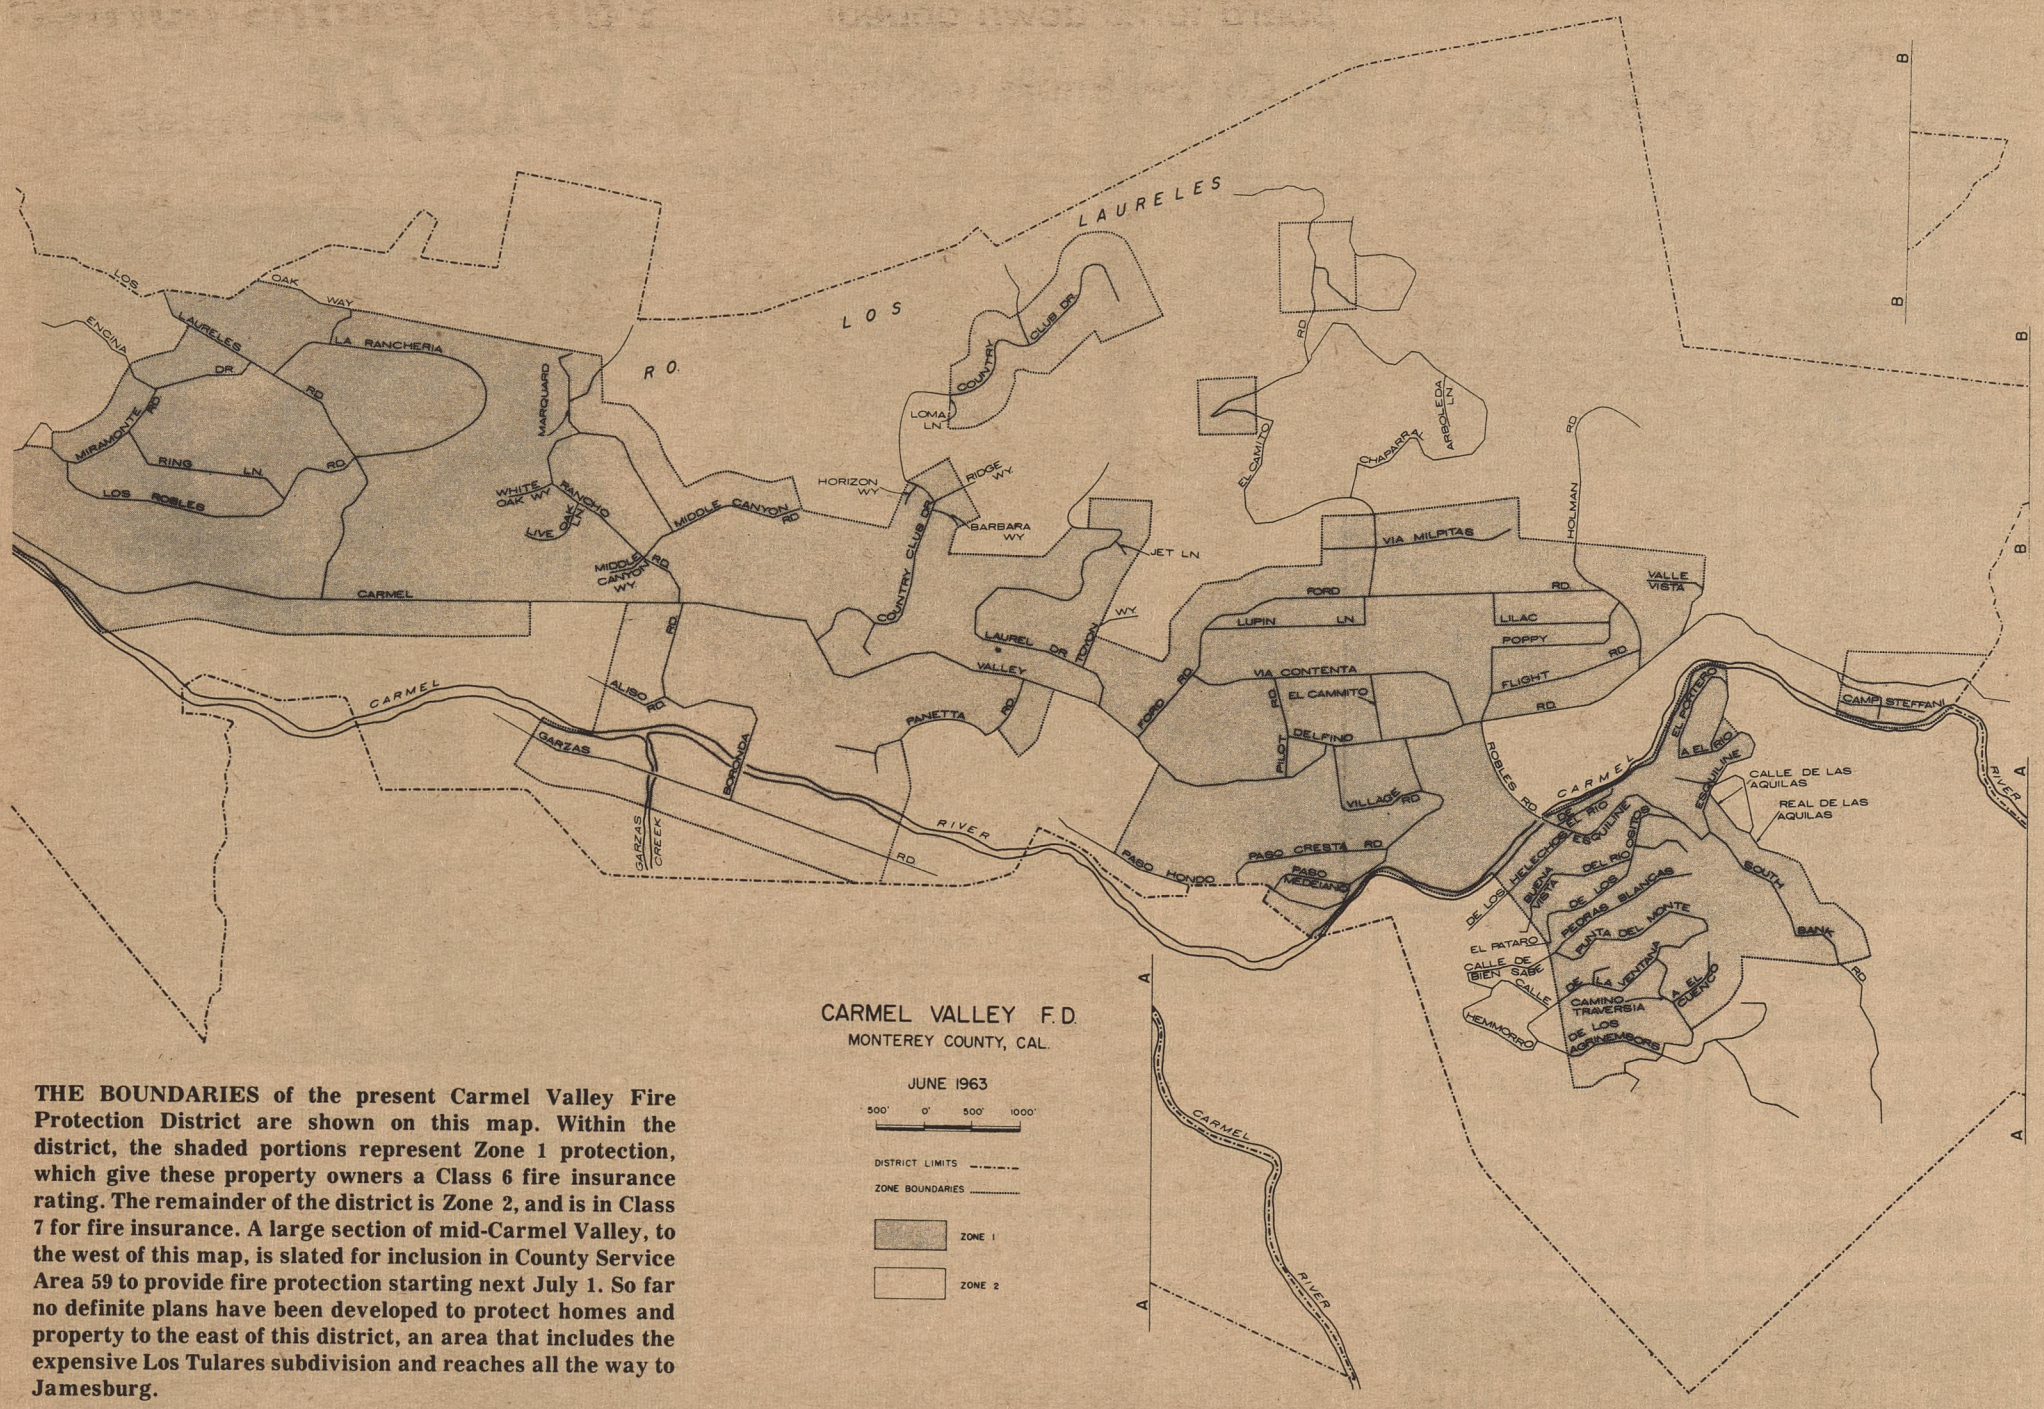
Cmdr. Frank L. Moody (USN ret.) of Carmel Valley was elected vice chairman at the same meeting. His last duty was operations officer at the Naval Air Landing Facility, Monterey.

Outgoing chairman Melvin W. Jasper of Carmel, an aviation instructor at Monterey Peninsula College, was elected regional director.

Serving a four-county, four-college area, the MBAAAB's membership is composed of aviation-oriented businessmen, educators, airport managers, pilots, Federal Aviation Agency personnel, fixed base operators, airline executives, aircraft sales people and maintenance-overhaul specialists.

One of the prime objectives of the MBAAAB is to coordinate the aviation programs on the campuses of Cabrillo, Gavilan, Hartnell and Monterey Peninsula Colleges.

By carefully steering a course "somewhere between being a pressure group or a rubber stamp breakfast group," the MBAAAB has begun to show the way for small colleges to get the most out of a specialized program by pooling their separate resources on a voluntary basis.



THE BOUNDARIES of the present Carmel Valley Fire Protection District are shown on this map. Within the district, the shaded portions represent Zone 1 protection, which give these property owners a Class 6 fire insurance rating. The remainder of the district is Zone 2, and is in Class 7 for fire insurance. A large section of mid-Carmel Valley, to the west of this map, is slated for inclusion in County Service Area 59 to provide fire protection starting next July 1. So far no definite plans have been developed to protect homes and property to the east of this district, an area that includes the expensive Los Tulares subdivision and reaches all the way to Jamesburg.

Area east of Village faces major fire protection problem

State not obligated to provide service after July 1

By PAT GRIFFITH

Attention was focused on the changing pattern of fire protection from upper Carmel Valley to Highway 1 this week. There were these developments:

1. The California State Board of Forestry formally notified the County that as of Jan. 1, 1972, it will no longer consider the flat land of Carmel Valley from the Farm Center to the ocean as part of its responsibility. However, fire protection will continue to July 1 under a contract with the County.

The State Division of Forestry will continue to provide fire protection for the hills on either side of the Valley during the fire season because this land is considered part of the watershed.

2. The Board of Supervisors hearing on the proposed County Service Area 59, to provide fire protection for the mid-Valley, will be held Nov. 9 at 10:30 a.m. At least three property owners within the proposed service area will make a final appeal to have all or part of their land removed from the service area.

3. For the first time, some residents in Los Tulares and areas east of Carmel Valley Village are starting to consider their fire protection needs.

A vast area east of the Village (see map) extending up to Cachagua Valley and Jamesburg will be without fire protection during the winter months starting next year.

This area, like the mid-Valley, has been protected by the State Division of Forestry under a contract paid for by the County. The County's contract will end next July 1.

The State Division of Forestry will keep a fire truck at the Tularcitos Station three miles east of the Village during the fire season, which normally extends from approximately June 1 to November 1.

But in the winter months, this station will be closed. And since there will be no County contract paying for a truck and crew at the Forestry station on Carmel Hill, fire protection will be virtually non-existent. (State Forest Ranger Richard Bawcom told the Outlook that "if we happened to have men in the area of the Carmel Hill Station, and if a truck was available, we could probably still respond to a call.") The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department is not responsible for these areas now covered by a County contract and can only respond to fires there on a mutual assistance call. In such a case the fire department in the Village can dispatch only one truck and a few men, since most equipment and manpower must be kept ready for calls from within the fire district.

NO FIRE PROTECTION

Not only are owners of expensive homes in Los Tulares facing the prospect of no fire protection, but so is the Little League field on Paso Hondo and the Trail and Saddle Club. Neither are part of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

The Los Tulares subdivision, with some 15 homes, is three miles from the fire station in the Village. It already has hydrants and an adequate water supply.

Several homeowners in this area have been receiving a Class 6 fire insurance rating, the same as is given to most homes within the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

However, according to the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau, this low insurance classification is not justified. The fact the Village station is only three miles away is irrelevant since Los Tulares is not part of the fire district.

In the past year, scores of homes in the mid-Valley which had been receiving a low Class 6 or Class 7 insurance rating have been jumped to Class 10, the highest risk category established by the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau. Typically this has meant an increase in annual premiums of around $200.

A Valley insurance expert says the same fate undoubtedly awaits property owners east of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District when their policies come up for renewal.

Property located within a five-mile radius of the fire department in the Village can be annexed to the district with a minimum of difficulty. Property owners would need to petition the district's directors for permission to annex, and, assuming approval was forthcoming, would then need to prepare a map showing the area to be annexed for the Local Agency Formation Commission.

Annexation to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District would involve a tax of 70 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. However fire insurance rates would presumably remain at their present level, rather than jumping to Class 10.

Fire Chief Chip Collins said this week that it is possible for an individual property owner to contract directly with the district to receive fire protection. In the case of an individual contract, the property owner would pay a lump sum equivalent to the 70 cent tax rate.

Supervisors to decide on Open Space District ballot measure Tuesday

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will be asked to put a measure establishing a Monterey Peninsula Park and Open Space District on the ballot next Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 2 p.m.

The proposed district would cover the area from Marina south to Anderson's Landing (below Big Sur) and the Carmel Valley, the same area as the Monterey Peninsula College District.

It would be administered by a five or seven member board (the number to be decided by the Board of Supervisors) elected by precinct, which would be empowered to levy property taxes of up to ten cents per $100 of assessed value, and to use the funds for acquiring public open space land.

Supporters of the proposition presented over 7,000 signatures on petitions asking for the district, but the decision of whether to place the measure on the ballot rests with the board of supervisors.

The measure is supported by local chapters of the League of Women Voters, Sierra Club and other groups. "They feel the district is necessary to protect the unique character and natural beauty of the Peninsula. The County Parks Commission is responsible for the entire county, and cannot meet the needs of the Peninsula, with its special features and problems," said Sean Flavin of Carmel Valley, chairman of the drive.

The Park and Open Space District, he said, would provide the mechanism "for keeping important open land from being developed."

FLAG FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS ON TULARCITOS FIELD

The rain-drenched turf at Tularcitos failed to dampen the enthusiasm of eight flag football teams who had Valley telephone wires humming early Saturday morning as they consulted Coach Herb Reuter, fellow teammates and the weatherman to determine if the 1971 season would open on schedule after the downpour of the night before. From the coach of the Community Center-sponsored Saturday recreation program, Herb Reuter, we obtained the following sports summary of the opening day games:

VIKINGS 26 - 49'ers 0

"From the opening kick-off, the Vikings awesome offense exploded for touchdowns in the 1st, 2nd and 4th quarters. Three Viking backs—Mark Nottenkamper, David and Jon Fogelmanis, shared scoring honors. Led by Garth Hattan, who blocked a 49er's punt for a safety in the 2nd quarter, the Viking defensive thwarted the 49er offense led by hard running Andy Lockwood and the valiant line play of Eric Hansen and Rich Klingensmith."

RAIDERS 0 - DRAGONS 0

Both teams defense nullified the offensive game. Outstanding on defense for the Raiders were Tim McCrary and Joe Victorine, while the Dragon's Jeff Harber and Kevin Taguchi repeatedly stopped the Raiders running game."

RAMS 24 - COLTS 12

Scoring opened by the Rams tallying 6 on a dazzling run around end by Sam Davidson. However, the Colts bucked back with explosive runs by Chris Fromm, Peter Deoudes and Chris Deoudes. Late in the 4th quarter, the Colts started rolling on the fine blocking of Tom Vannatta and with time for one play remaining, Vannatta's key block allowed Davidson to score again."

RAIDERS 12 - JETS 6

"The second game for the day for the Raiders first half saw a running duel between Jodie Moore of the Jets and Tim Sherman of the Raiders. Each back scoring. Late in the second half, Steve Draper stopped an apparent tally but in so doing was injured and had to leave the game. This upset the balance and gave the edge to the Raiders who again scored during the second half."

The game schedule for Saturday, October 26 is: Field No. 1 (9:30 a.m.)

49er's vs. Raiders; Field No. 2: Dragons vs. Vikings (10:30) Field No. 1: Colts vs. Jets; Field No. 2: 49er's vs. Rams. No admission charge for these games on the Tularcitos Field off Pilot Road.

FOLLOWING A SOUTHERN California honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Edward Dani (shown here at their wedding reception with the bride's parents, Capt. and Mrs. George J. Pullman at Los Laureles Lodge). The bride is the former Susan Renee Pullman of Carmel Valley. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. D.P. Cardner of the Valley. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dani of King City. The couple were married in a 7:00 p.m. ceremony read at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church by Rev. James Brock. Their attendants were Mrs. JoEllen Esplin of Carmel Valley and Mrs. James Gresham, sr. of Salinas.

Palo Alto-Salinas earnings up sharply

Appearing before a select group of financial analysts and institutional investors in New York City last week, Firmin A. Gryp, president of Palo Alto-Salinas Savings and Loan Association announced net earnings for the first three quarters of 1971 amounted to $4,421,225, an increase of 33.7 percent over the same period in 1970. Per share earnings were $1.79 and $1.34 based on average shares outstanding for each period.

Assets at Sept. 30, 1971 were $523,230,126, compared to $443,713,484 on the same date one year ago, an annual growth rate of nearly 24 percent during the first nine months of 1971.

Gryp stated that the company enjoyed "an unprecedented savings inflow" of $63,563,097 during the three quarters, enabling the association to maintain high volume loan production while reducing Federal Home Loan Bank borrowings from 14 percent to less than eight percent of total savings...

New loan production for the period was $134,900,000 in 1971 vs. $70,500,000 for the like period in 1970. The average yield on the real estate loan portfolio increased during the third quarter from 7.43 percent to 7.46 percent.

"The continuing high quality of our loan portfolio," Gryp commented, "is evidenced by the fact that on Sept. 30 the delinquency ratio was the lowest in our history, and our scheduled items ratio was less than ½ of one percent, which is among the lowest in the industry."

Approval of the association's 17th office which will be located in Morgan Hill was announced last week and an application has now been filed, according to Gryp, for a branch facility in the city of Concord. An application for the city of Burlingame is also pending.

College Night at high school Tuesday

College Night, an annual event sponsored by the Padre Parents of Carmel High School, will be held Tuesday evening at 7:45 in the high school's Brey Hall.

Representatives from four different kinds of institutions of higher learning will speak: California state colleges, private colleges and universities, junior colleges and the University of California.

Each representative will give a brief general view of his institution and then answer questions.

The evening is particularly planned for students and parents of junior and senior grades, but everyone is invited.

Sunset views:

By FRANK H. RILEY
MANAGER SUNSET CENTER

HUZZAH! or maybe Eureka! or at least Cheers!

Last week we published our schedule of Sunset classes and, lo and behold, we had more phone calls than have ever been generated by this column. It's great to know that you are "reading" me!

This time I would like to get through to those of youwhodo homecraft projects on a non-commercial basis. For example, you may knit or crochet, or do sewing, or maybe specialize in cookies—or cakes—or pies, or perhaps you paint, or do woodcarving, or block prints.

Whatever it is you do, there are many folks who would be delighted to purchase some of the things you make, thus enriching their lives and, at the same time, providing a little extra Christmas Fund for you. In order to get you, the Homecrafter, together with your prospective clients, we are announcing the "FIRST ANNUAL SUNSET HOMECRAFTERS MARKET PLACE."

It is our plan to mark out a suitable number of spaces on our South parking lot and to accept registration for these spaces on a first-come basis to Carmel residents and to Carmel non-profit groups who wish to take part. After several days of registration, if additional spaces are available, they will be assigned to any other qualified applicants who may wish to apply.

The two major requirements are these:

(1) You must be a non-profit homecrafter or a certified non-profit group.

(2) The articles for sale must be "homecrafted" on a non-commercial basis.

The Homecrafters Market is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 20.

Set-up time for participants will be from 8 to 10 a.m. Sale begins at 10 a.m. and continues to 4 p.m. The registration fee, payable to Sunset Center, is $2 for each space. The participant will supply his own tables, chairs or other desired equipment.

Sunset Center will be selling coffee and soft drinks but no other comestibles. We hope that several participants will be selling homemade cakes, cookies, and donuts along with the other homecrafted articles so that hungry shoppers can be revived on the spot.

We call it the FIRST Annual Homecrafters Market because we hope it will be so much fun that Carmel Homecrafters will want to make it a yearly event.

Days to sign up:

November 1-12, Carmel non-profit groups or individuals only.

November 15-19 Any qualified groups or individuals.

Any questions? Call 624-3996.

Local youths explore Exploring

A co-education representation of 18 boys and 14 girls from Carmel High School attended a career night Exploring program at the Mark Thomas Hyatt House in Monterey Oct. 13.

Exploring is a division of Boy Scouts of America, but, unlike scouting, this program is for young men and women between 15 and 20 and no uniforms are worn.

The program was set up for young adults to explore the careers of aviation, computer science, photography, medicine and auto mechanics. There are 20 Explorer Posts on the Peninsula with more than 250 members.

Relax. New gas ovens clean themselves.

Not only do new gas ovens clean themselves, but smokeless gas broiling keeps your kitchen clean. You broil with the oven door closed and the flame consumes the smoke.

You can also relax with automatic programmed cooking. With this worksaving feature you pre-set the oven. Then, it turns itself on, cooks the meal, and turns itself down to keep food warm and ready to serve—without overcooking. Take a look at the handsome, new gas ranges at your appliance dealer's soon. Padres seek first win

"We're just too inconsistent," was the way Padre football coach Jason Harbert explained the fact that his team has yet to win a game, after sustaining its fifth straight loss in an oh-so-close 22-20 loss against San Lorenzo Valley last Saturday.

"Our main hope for the rest of the season is in the possibility that our young defense will continue to improve," the head coach said.

Carmel's footballers face Marello Prep of Santa Cruz in the season's first home game, 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Bardarson Field. Harbert expects another close game. "They are very much like King City and San Lorenzo Valley," he said. "In fact, I'd say that very little separates the four of us teams."

AUTHOR WILLIAM BRANDON delighted an enthusiastic group of Tularcitos students with his vivid accounts of Indian life. Brandon is the author of the American Heritage Book of Indians.

Indian lore told Tularcitos children

Few subjects hold more fascination for children than the role of the Indian in American history. And few subjects are filled with more stereotypes and misinformation.

Students in second-third grade class at Tularcitos School had an unusual opportunity to get some straight answers about Indians this week when William Brandon, author of the American Heritage Book of Indians, joined them for an informal discussion.

During the course of a lively question and answer session, Brandon emphasized that the TV image of the Indian as a wild savage on a perpetual warpath is far from an accurate picture of the original Americans.

"We have the idea that Indians spent most of their time shooting arrows at us palefaces, that they were very warlike," Brandon said. "The truth is not quite that way. The truth is that when Europeans first came to this country, the Indians didn't really know much about what we would call war."

In pre-Columbian times, Brandon explained, only a few tribes were real fighters, and even among those tribes, "war," was a brief, often ceremonial event involving small numbers of men for no more than a few days.

In many tribes, Brandon said, men lived all their lives without ever going to war, and among the Pima Indians of Arizona, anyone who killed an enemy in a war was regarded as insane and had to go through a treatment for insanity.

It wasn't until the white man arrived, Brandon said, that Indians in great numbers learned the art of warfare as paid fighters for the French, British or Spanish.

In response to a question about scalping, Brandon said that historians have uncovered proof of only two instances of scalping before Europeans arrived in America.

"Hardly any Indians knew anything about scalping until they were taught by the Europeans," Brandon said. "The French hired Indians from a tribe that practiced scalping and sent them out to scalp other Indians. That was how the practice spread."

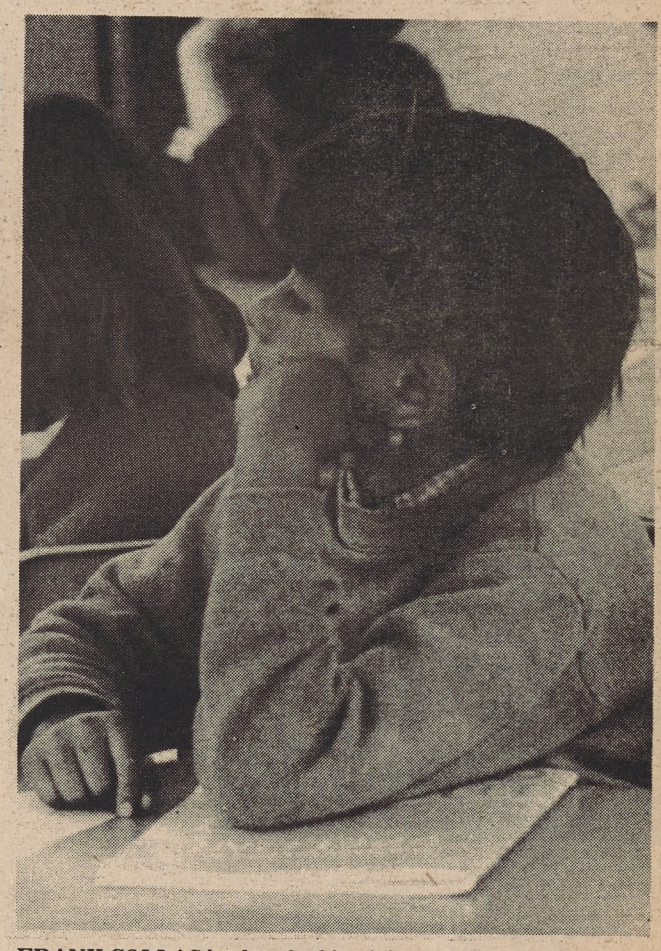
Brandon noted that at that time in history, scalping an enemy or cutting off an enemy's head was a world-wide practice, dating back as far as early Greece.

He added that when George Washington served as a lieutenant under British General Edward Braddock in the French and Indian War, Braddock posted a list of prices he would pay for various scalps, with the scalp of a French priest at the top of the list.

Two other misconceptions about Indians that Brandon straightened out involved headdresses and eating mud.

The colorful feathered headdress, Brandon said, was in fact worn only by some Plains Indians, and usually for ceremonial purposes. For centuries, most Indians wore turbans, while some tribes wove basket-type hats.

As for mud, Brandon said that many Indian tribes rubbed mud on their bodies and then washed in natural hot spas. Many did eat small amounts of clay, however, a practice that continues today in parts of the Southwest.



FRANK COLLAS is absorbed in visions of bygone days.

LIZ WARNER listens intently to a discussion about American Indians.

NO ONE WANTED TO MISS a word when Indian expert William Brandon told how it really was during the early days of American history. Brandon visited the class taught by Mrs. Evelyn Holmes and Mrs. Susan Venturelli for a free-wheeling question and answer session Tuesday morning.

Planning Commissioner Keith Evans resigns:

'The conservationists need only one more victory like the Odello decision to be out of business.'

By PAT GRIFFITH

I DON'T THINK the Monterey County Area Master Plan is worth the paper it's written on anymore."

With these words Keith Evans of Carmel sums up his reasons for becoming the first person ever to resign from the Monterey County Planning Commission because of personal convictions.

Evans announced his unexpected resignation last week in the wake of the Board of Supervisors' decision denying rezoning to the Odello brothers.

As a member of the Planning Commission, Evans had voted to approve rezoning for a 1,547 unit development because he felt this was consistent with the Three Ranches Plan and the Area Master Plan, two documents he had a share in shaping.

ON MONDAY, relaxed after a weekend at his vacation retreat in Big Sur, Evans voiced deep concern, but no bitterness, over recent planning decisions which have engulfed the Monterey Peninsula in controversy and changed the course of his own life.

"My basic feeling is that the supervisors' decision was unfortunate," Evans said. "I feel there was an injustice done to the Odellos. But the worst injustice is to the County's planning process. Frankly, I don't think the County Master Plan is worth the paper it's written on anymore."

Evans was a member of the Area Planning Commission in 1966 when the Three Ranches Plan, a proposal for eventual development of the Odello, Fish and Hudson-Riley ranches prepared by the landowners, was incorporated into the overall Area Plan.

"These weren't perfect plans, certainly, but it seemed to us at the time that they held a lot of promise for the future. They held out the hope of allowing the landowner reasonable development while still maintaining the most important scenic values of the area...

"But with the supervisors' vote, I think these plans are finished.

"I know there are many dedicated conservationists around here who are delighted with all this. My feeling is that the conservation group only needs one more victory of this sort to be out of business."

EVANS SAID he is sympathetic to the problems facing the Board of Supervisors, and particularly Supervisor Willard Branson of Carmel Valley, "whom I admire and respect tremendously, even though I may not always agree with him.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that a better procedure would have been for the supervisors to set what sort of density they considered reasonable, perhaps 1200 units, maybe 1000, and then have said to Odello, 'See what you can come up with at this level.'

"If that had happened, it would have established that the board was trying to work within the Three Ranches Plan (which allotted a range of density from 950 to 2250 for the 292-acre Odello property.) But by simply turning the proposal down flat, they threw out the whole thing."

One of the things bothering Evans most is what he considers to be a fairly widespread idea that complex planning and development problems can be resolved in a matter of days or a few weeks.

"I think it's partly the effect of television," he mused. "On TV a situation is presented, there are some very big problems, these are overcome in about 20 minutes, and by the end of the show everything is resolved. It's a case of instant solutions.

"I think what we have going on now is 'instant planning,' and planning with a sledgehammer.

"Having been in this field for 15 years, I know this just isn't the way things happen...there are so many ramifications—the fears, the personalities, the economics involved, the politics. It took us a good five years to work out the Area Master Plan...

"There's the Coast Plan, I think one of the best things we've ever done. There was an article in Reader's Digest that suggested that all that was involved was a few neighbors got together, and a few phone calls were made, and overnight the coast was saved.

"That's ridiculous! It took three or four years of very hard work. There were endless meetings. Infinite negotiations. All sorts of reasonable concessions were made. And it was not done in 90 days, the way it seemed from the Reader's Digest.

"No matter what we say, the large property owners around here have preserved the land, and they are entitled to a reasonable economic return. I think this is what we contracted to give them—a reasonable deal for the conservationists and for them.

"Frankly, I don't think they should stand still for any more planning..."

Evans said he feels the Area Plan should be revised "to bring it up to date. But," he adds, "I'm just afraid it may be revised the wrong way for a lot of conservationists."

VERY SOON, he feels, the County is going to have to face the problem of providing for more low and moderate income housing, "including around Carmel, and even in Carmel Valley." Evans said there may be strings attached to any federal funds going for updating the Area Plan stipulating that the county plan for low cost housing.

This is still another area in which Evnas disagrees with the supervisors, who recently turned down, on a 3-2 vote, a low cost housing project in Del Monte Park.

"This may be something I'm not keen about and no one else is either," Evans said. "But this is something we need to accept. I think the board might have explained this to people."

Evans has also disagreed with recent decisions on rezoning matters in the mouth of Carmel Valley, particularly the decision to rezone a 7½ acre parcel on Val Verde Drive for a 45-unit condominium development.

But in his 15 years on the Planning Commission, Evans said, he has never been subjected to as much personal attack and pressure as he was during the recent Odello upheaval.

"It was about the dirtiest campaign in the name of conservation I've ever seen," he said calmly.

"I've always been a conservationist, and I think that's how I've generally been regarded.

"But this was the bitterest fight I've ever seen, even more than Humble Oil. I was accused of taking bribes, of selling out...

"I had some letters that were pretty strong, and lots of phone calls, with people saying, 'You'd better vote right or else.'

"I guess there were half a dozen calls I could validly say were threatening or vaguely threatening.

"This is something new. In Monterey County we've always been able to disagree and still get along..."

EVANS HAS NO "instant solution" to suggest to help the county save scenic open space and still provide for "reasonable" development.

He has only words of highest praise for County Planning Director Ed DeMars and his professional staff. He would like to see the proposed conservation and open space district come into being—an idea he urged without success 15 years ago.

But he isn't sure just what should happen next.

"I think there are many, many people who want to do the right thing. The population of Monterey County has grown less than the State average, and we haven't been inundated like they have been in Southern California.

"One reason is the County has rather strict subdivision regulations...

"We are well protected, but we are losing a lot of our protection when we battle amongst ourselves. I think if we could just have a little more tolerance for each other, and then put up a front against the real outsiders who would come in here to make a fast profit, instead of just giving our local landowners hell all the time...

"You know," he added with a twinkling smile, "I'm just sure that when the Spaniards landed here, the local Indians thought, 'My God! We can't assimilate 100 Spaniards!' And of course they did.

"And later on, when the Yankees arrived, the Spaniards undoubtedly thought there wasn't enough room for them, because everybody knew that it took 10,000 acres to support one family...

"Oh, I'm not against drawing a line on population, but the question is—where do you draw it?"

On plans for his own immediate future, Evans was more definite. He left Tuesday for a 10-day vacation in Nevada, to camp and hunt in the snow near Elko.

He doesn't plan to look back with regret at the Planning Commission that has dominated his time since 1956.

"My wife complains sometimes that I can just cut something off and say 'that's it. That's done with. Now we move to something else.' But I can do that, and I think it's best. No regrets. None at all."

Branson lauds Evans

Supervisor Willard Branson released this statement on Keith Evans' resignation from the Monterey County Planning Commission:

"It is with sincere and deep regret that I must accept the resignation of Keith Evans on the Monterey County Planning Commission. Keith Evans has been if not the most, one of the most effective planning commissioners Monterey County has ever known. His interest in protecting the Big Sur area, Carmel Valley, Carmel, the Monterey Peninsula and the county as a whole have far exceeded that of anyone I know. His knowledge of the history, character and personality of our community is without equal.

"Mr. Evans has been dedicated to the principle that only through planning, good planning, can we properly save our identity and practice the most effective means of conservation. It is to this end that he has given so unstintingly of his time.

"I take this opportunity to personally and in behalf of our community to thank this tremendous citizen for his contributions to our Peninsula and County, which still stands as a monument to beauty."

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

A SURPRISINGLY large number of cat owners have approached us recently to ask what they can do about cats that have suddenly forgotten their housebreaking. These people were all referring to cats that have been trained to use a litter pan indoors as opposed to those felines who take care of their needs in a convenient flower bed.

Cats are usually the easiest animals to housebreak. Mother cats often train their kittens at about the time they wean them—roughly six weeks. The chances are that by the time you take the kitten into your house, it's already trained—which means it's learned to cover its wastes carefully—indoors or out.

If you get a kitten that's been taught by its mother to relieve itself outdoors and you've decided that kitty is to be an indoor cat, you must accustom the cat to using a litter pan. This is almost always a rapid and painless process.

First you obtain a pan and some litter. In our modern, plasticized era, most people buy a conventional plastic "cat box" at the nearest pet shop or supermarket. They also pick up a sack of commercial cat litter.

But you can use an old-fashioned enamel pan or a dish-pan—anything, in fact, that's waterproof, rustless and washable. Some people use shredded newspaper as litter; others use plain sand, shavings or sawdust. Sometimes, however, the cat will refuse one type of litter and accept another.

Introduce the kitten to its pan, which should be kept in an easily accessible spot—most people prefer the bathroom. You can gently take one of the kitten's paws and "dig" it into the litter just to give the cat the idea. That's all that's required. Just keep an eye on the kitten after it's eaten for a few days to make sure it heads for that litter pan when Nature calls.

THERE ARE several reasons for a cat who is in good health to boycott its litter pan. A mature cat who suddenly becomes incontinent may not be a well cat, but a very sick one. Lack of bladder control may indicate urinary tract or kidney infections that require immediate veterinary attention. Note that we said incontinent; illness has nothing to do with voluntary discharging of urine in the sexually mature, unaltered male cat. That's known as "spraying" and is quite another matter!

But if your apparently healthy cat is refusing to use its litter pan, you're probably at fault. Cats, being naturally fastidious, insist that their humans be the same. And that goes for the care they give the cat's litter pan.

Any cat with normal feline sensibilities will refuse to use a dirty, smelly pan. If you can smell the pan, you can be sure your cat can! And the odor is infinitely more unpleasant to the cat than it is to you!

Your cat's pan should be sifted of solid matter at least once a day; even better, get into the habit of sifting it out as often as necessary. The entire pan should be emptied and washed thoroughly with soap and hot water if the litter appears to be more wet than dry, if the pan smells, or if the cat acts fussy about using it.

It's a good idea to buy an aerosol can of cat box deodorant spray. Although this is no substitute for a clean cat box, it does help to prolong the life of the cat litter and mask any unpleasant odors.

WE HAVE KNOWN cats who, being displeased with the state of their litter pan, daintily relieve themselves in the bathtub, the sink, or on a convenient bath rug as a warning to their thoughtless owners. And these cats only "err" when their pan is dirty! So before you blame the cat, be sure it's not your fault.

Reports have also reached us of cats refusing to use some of the new "organic" scented cat litter. If you can trace toileting problems to a change in cat litter, it might be worth switching back to the old brand.

A common problem with otherwise well-trained cats is their unflagging interest in converting the fireplace into a cat box. There seems to be something about those ashes! Our only suggestions include keeping the fireplace as empty of ashes as possible; getting a securely-fitting screen; and sprinkling a few fireplace ashes in the cat's litter box.

For cats who prefer using your bathtub to their litter pan, try keeping two inches of water in the tub for a few days. The cat may jump into that tub once more, but he'll probably never trust it again! The same goes for any favorite sinks.

Another consideration in solving cat toileting problems is that of the cat's innate modesty. Cats like privacy as they go about their toilet. The cat pan should be in an unobtrusive, quiet corner.

The final point to consider is whether the cat is too big or too small for the pan. Kittens don't like jumping into a pan that they can't see into; and male cats, especially, require much larger pans than females. Perhaps you need a new litter pan that "fits the cat."

New Valley resident heads Ft. Ord experiment command

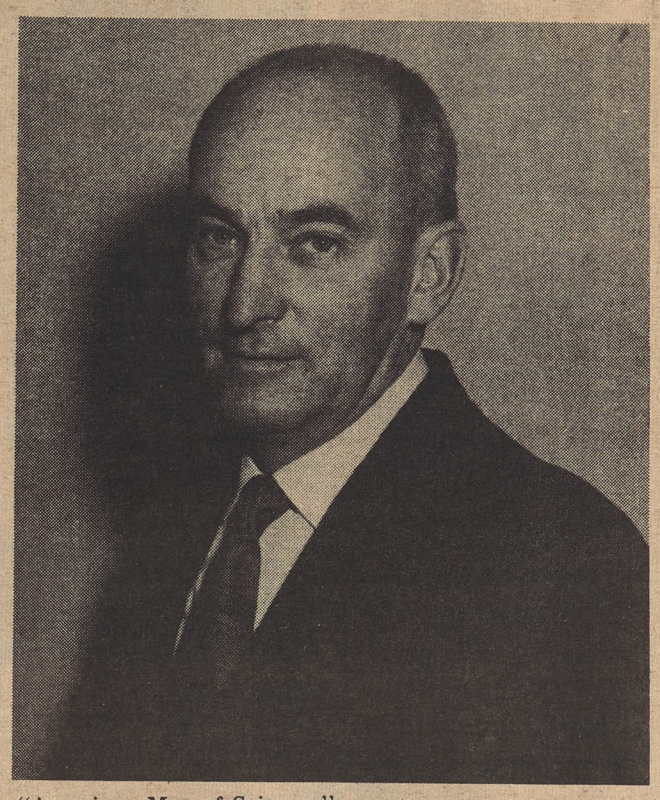
The Carmel Valley has another new family and the Army Combat Developments Experimentation Command at Fort Ord has a new scientific group to assist them in their experimentation. Dr. Daniel F. McDonald heads them both.

He is director of the Braddock, Dunn and McDonald Services Company, a subsidiary of the BDM Incorporated, of El Paso, Texas, recently replacing the Litton Scientific Support Laboratories of Van Nuys, Calif., as contractual scientists to CDED; and he is head of the house newly obtained in Carmel Valley where he will reside permanently with his wife, Marie, and their two sons and four daughters, the eldest of whom is 13 and the youngest, 3.

McDonald, a PhD physics graduate of Fordham University in New York where he also served as assistant professor of physics, took his master's degree (also in physics) at Harvard. He is nationally known in the fields of operations research, field experimentation and evaluation and has a broadly based Research and Developments and general management background. He is co-founder of the BDM, and its senior vice-president and has been a member of its Board of Directors since 1959.

The company has participated in activities of the U.S. Army in weapons systems analysis, evaluation and testing communities for over 10 years. During the last five, it has supported many Army programs as testing and support contractors including, in 1966, the Joint Task Force Two experiment with CDED at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

Dr. McDonald is the author of a number of papers in electronics and physics and is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. He is listed in the "American Men of Science."



The BDM offices here are located at Fort Ord on CDED Hill in the buildings formerly occupied by the LSSL group.

EVE TARTAR shown with one of her wood constructions entitled "Grecian Receptivity." A three-weeks exhibition of her work is at the Carmel Valley Manor.

Eve Tartar's 'Inner Landscapes' on exhibit at Carmel Valley Manor

Eve Tartar's paper and wood constructions, called "Inner Landscapes," are being exhibited at Carmel Valley Manor for three weeks. Added to her paper sculpture under glass, and to her Point Lobos wood constructions, are color distillations—miniature collage, layer upon layer of fragile materials that build to lyrical mystical forms. At the Carmel Valley Manor, these examples of the artist's current direction are being shown for the first time.

Of this exhibit, Eve Tartar explained: "The work is not a representation of Nature but does symbolize my own experience of Nature. My dominant theme always involves the play between the masculine and feminine expressions of Energy—the reaching and the receiving. I believe that the process of Creation in all Nature and in all Art involves this play of the domineering forces interacting with the yielding forces. I think of reds as masculine, blues as feminine; incoming tides as masculine, ebb-tides as feminine; an unbroken line as masculine, an interrupted line as feminine. The creative process involves the push and pull of these masculine and feminine Energy-Forces. I know Art, Life, Intuition, and Intelligence as four pillars supporting the non-material, 'studio-temple' of my inner world."

Work by local artists available on rental

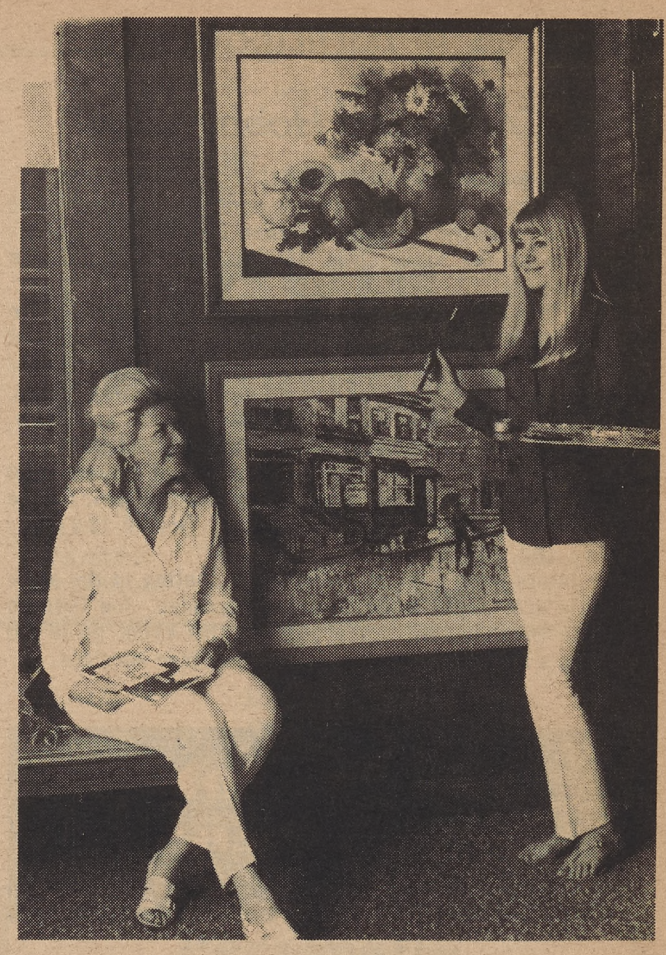
The chance to live with a work of art before buying it is offered by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, Monterey.

The newly-opened rental gallery, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jess Braucht of Carmel, comprises about 135 paintings, sculptures and prints executed by 60 well-known award-winning local artists whose works were selected by a jury.

The modest rental fees, which average $3 to $12 per month, with a three-month minimum rental, may be applied against the purchase price if it is bought.

The collection is housed next to the Gift Shop on the Main Floor.

Among the artists represented are: CARMEL: Kathryn Aurner, Babs Balzer, Dolores Bowman, Gilbert Boyd, C.R. Brown, Hamilton Brown, Linda Chrysler, L.F. Churchill, Helen Dooley, Francisco Ferro, Bernice Huber, Marta Huth, Betty Pleshe, Joan Savo, Joseph Tanous, Isabel Tavernetti, Edith Truesdell, Kenneth Wiese, Jean Wilsdon, S.C. Yuan; CARMEL VALLEY: Dick Crispo, Frances Mitchell, Molla, Martha Senger, Eva Tartar; and PEBBLE BEACH: Ellwood Graham, Fay Hopkins, Jerry Megart, Linda Simpson.



TALENT RUNS IN THE FAMILY where Virginia Ford and her daughter, Linda, are concerned. The mother-daughter duo now have a joint exhibit on view at the Village Art Gallery on Delfino Place. Their paintings include a variety of oils, acrylics, watercolors and pastels. The gallery is open afternoons from noon to 6 p.m., and will be open all day Saturday during fiesta time on Delfino Place.

Rummage sale to benefit Cypress Swim

The Cypress Swim Club will conduct its annual fund-raising rummage sale Saturday at the American Legion Hall on Dolores near Eighth from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In former years, the award-winning synchronized swimming club has held two sales, one in the spring and one in the fall, but this year it has decided to combine the two into one giant event.

Members have been busy all year collecting items for the sale, and, in keeping with their "Something for Everyone" theme, they have come up with some very unusual merchandise in addition to the normal clothing and household items.

New features this year will include a Garden Corner with potted plants and cuttings, and a Cypress Crafts Table featuring handcrafted articles made by swimmer members of the Cypress Swim Club.

All proceeds from the sale benefit the travel fund of the local non-profit Cypress Swim Club which conducts a program of competitive synchronized swimming, competing in AAU meets on a regional and national basis.

Hidden Valley Seminars forms childrens' theatre

The Hidden Valley Music Seminars this week announced the opening of its Childrens Theatre program. The program will consist of adults performing for children in both old and newly written plays, with performances every other Saturday afternoon beginning Nov. 20 at 2:30 p.m. All productions will be held in the main theatre of the Sunset Cultural Center.

James Mairs, director of the Childrens Theatre, is looking for enthusiastic and creative people of all ages "to bring an exciting and new theatrical experience to the children of Carmel." Mairs says he intends the first production to include a demonstration of the potential of the theatre, "an introductory journey into the magic of a living theatre."

He will rely on the personal talents and innovativeness of the members of the 15-person company to be selected by audition.

"I hope to give the children an experience unlike anything they've seen on television and to give the cast a chance to write and perform for a sensitive and demanding audience," he said.

Auditions will be held Sunday afternoon, Oct. 24, at 2 p.m. in Room 5, Sunset Center.

Pinata Auction goal $100,000

The Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies will benefit from one of the largest fund-raising events ever held on the Monterey Peninsula.

The $100,000 goal set by the Pinata members will provide additional financial assistance to this unique, non-profit college that offers intensive language and area study instruction for all the major foreign-speaking countries in the world.

The Saturday event at the Monterey County Fairgrounds will begin at 6 p.m. when auction items can be previewed before the auctioneers get the evening started at 7:30.

In addition to Saturday's gala affair, a special preview of auction items has been arranged for Friday, between 4 and 8 p.m. in the exhibition hall at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

Admission is $2.50 and sealed bids will be accepted on any of the 400-plus items. Twenty-five percent of the bid must be left as deposit but this will be refunded if the bid is unsuccessful.

Faculty and students from the MIFS will be on hand to lend assistance and answer questions.

Rosamund Goodrich to direct 'They Knew What They Wanted'

Auditions for parts in the next production at the Circle Theatre, They Knew What They Wanted, will be held this weekend at the theatre on Casanova St.

Rosamund Goodrich, who will direct the play, will audition for seven male parts and one female role Friday, Oct. 22 at 8 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

The play is due to open near the end of November. Interested persons can call Miss Goodrich at 624-8057 for information.

The governing board of the Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula selected the play and director at its meeting Tuesday night.

Miss Goodrich has played extensively in local theatres. She appeared in Cat On a Hot Tin Roof, The King and I and The Rainmaker at the Old Wharf Theatre in Monterey, and later in The Queen's Husband at the old Golden Bough Theatre.

She later had roles in Curious Savage, The Miracle Worker, Mary, Mary, Look Back in Anger and Pygmalion at the Circle Theatre. Her sole directing chore was in the Circle production of Caesar and Cleopatra.

Mother of seven daughters (and no sons), she is married to MPC drama instructor Nick Zanides. They make their home in Rancho Tierra Grande in Carmel Valley.

Miss Goodrich studied drama at the Perry-Mansfield School of Theatre and Dance in Colorado, and later with Abbott-Abrams in San Francisco.

They Knew What They Wanted is a warm, wonderful play," Miss Goodrich told the OUTLOOK. "We selected it partly because of the current rage for nostalgia." (The play takes place in 1924). She also pointed out that the musical hit, The Most Happy Fella' was based on the play.

Studio benefit for Circle

The Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula will benefit from a special performance of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," next Wednesday night, Oct. 27, at the Studio-Theatre-Restaurant on Dolores St.

Price of the dinner and show is $7; cost for seeing the play only is $3 per person.

The show has enjoyed a successful run at the Studio since its opening last month. It is due to close Saturday, Oct. 29.

For reservations or information, interested persons can call 624-1661.

THE ACROPOLIS in Athens, Greece as seen in Philip Walker's new film "Impressions of Greece". An Explorama presentation, showing at Sunset Center, Oct. 22 and 23.

THE PHONE BOOTH

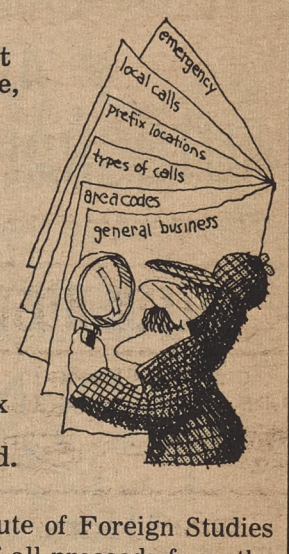
Telephone Pioneers
60 YEARS OF HUMAN SERVICE

This is the insignia of the Telephone Pioneers of America, 335,000 men and women from the telephone industry who believe that the most meaningful contributions an individual can make to his community are his time and energy.

This month, the Pioneers celebrate 60 years of "human service." In that time, they've worked as hospital volunteers, collected and repaired toys and clothes for needy children and worked extensively with the blind. These are only a few of their contributions.

We're proud to have such concerned, involved men and women represent our industry.

The next time you have a question about your telephone service, check the front pages of your phone book. There you can find Area Codes for the United States and Canada, numbers for your police and fire departments, how to make different types of calls and other helpful information. There's even an index to save you time in finding what you need.



The Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies will be the recipient of all proceeds from the gala Pinata Auction to be held October 23rd at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

Set to begin at 6 p.m. in the exhibition hall, those attending will find unique and valued items that will go to the highest bidder.

The evening's attire, Black Tie - optional or International dress, will set the mood for this elegant affair.

Tickets are $50 per person and include: $25 worth of scrip for bidding, wine, hors d'oeuvres, buffet dinner, continued drinks and a midnight supper.

Ticket information can be obtained by writing: Pinata Auction, Box 1978, Monterey, California 93940; or by calling: (408) 373-2791, ext. 62.

VALLEY LIBRARY

BY BETTY SHIELDS
CARMEL VALLEY LIBRARIAN

On Wednesday mornings at 10:30 the preschool children who have made it past that magic third birthday are invited to the library for Mrs. Huntington's popular story hours. Any adults who enjoy watching happy little ones will be welcome too! We're glad to share the bright spot of our week.

Something new has been added to our library. We now have a rack of paperback books. Judging by the rate they travel out the door it is a good collection. There are many more of these books to come our way, so keep an eye on them.

The last meeting of the Monterey County Library branch librarians was exciting. A number of delightful librarians from San Francisco came down to explain their wonderful reference service known as BART. Our own cooperative library system, MOBAC, has recently joined this outstanding service for reference questions that cannot be answered locally. We are on a teletype hookup with them for speedy transmittal of our questions and their answers.

Does everyone remember that it's only on Thursday that the library doesn't open till 12:00? And remains open from 6:00 to 8:00 in the evening? The other days of the week are as always 9:00 to 12:00 and 1:00 to 5:00.

Be seeing you!

Earthquake expert to speak to CVPOA Nov. 4

Karl V. Steinbrugge, head of the earthquake department of the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau, will address a general membership meeting of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association on Thursday, Nov. 4.

The public meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Carmel Valley Manor. The CVPOA will have a guide near the entrance to direct drivers to a large parking area which will be available for the evening.

Steinbrugge will discuss earthquakes and earthquake damage to buildings and property, with particular emphasis on the Monterey Peninsula.

Steinbrugge is in charge of the earthquake insurance rating activities of the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau. Also under his direction are all of the earthquake engineering studies related to the evaluation of seismic risk to individual properties.

He teaches courses in earthquake engineering and structural engineering to fifth year architectural students at the University of California at Berkeley, and is chairman of an advisory group on engineering consideration and earthquake sciences to the Joint Committee on Seismic Safety of the California Legislature.

He is a member of both national and international groups concerned with earthquake engineering, and is past president of the Seismological Society of America.

Noto loses yet another round on mobile home

Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon last week denied Dr. Joseph Noto's request for a variance to permit him to use a mobile home on Schulte Road for permanent living quarters.

Noto is expected to appeal the decision to the Board of Supervisors.

He requested the variance because his property, a 16-acre parcel on the south side of the river, is zoned KGJB4. The "J" zone prohibits the use of trailers or mobile homes for permanent residences.

Noto originally put the shake-roofed mobile home on his property as a "demonstration model" for what he hoped would become a 75-unit mobile home park. His applications for a mobile home park were turned down twice by the Monterey County Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors.

As of yesterday, this was the status on three development plans in Carmel Valley:

1. The County Road Department has issued an encroachment permit to Larry Cummings allowing him to start preliminary grading work on county property off of Rancho Fiesta Road. Cummings must still meet a list of conditions specified by the County Building Department before he will receive a grading permit for an access road running up the hillside to seven building sites along the crest of the hill.

2. An application for design approval for four duplexes at the eastern edge of Carmel Valley Village was unanimously rejected by the County Planning Commission.

The commission instructed developer Richard Hall to submit his complete plans to the Upper Valley Advisory Committee for review before returning to the commission for further consideration.

3. One condition on the use permit granted Robert Bolman of Pebble Beach for a commercial development at the corner of Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road has been loosened a bit by the Planning Commission. The original requirement that he provide one parking space for every four seats of a proposed twin movie theater was changed to read one parking space for every six seats.
